Fallen Fields

First World War 1914–1918

Before the war

In the early 1900s, Britain was one of the world's most powerful nations and had a large empire. British politicians wanted to avoid wars, there had been a period of peace in Europe. However, Germany was becoming a cause for concern, ruled by an ambitious kaiser who was envious of Britain's military strength.

Causes of war

The First World War started after the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand on 28th June 1914. However, other factors, including imperialism, nationalism, militarism and alliances between countries, also contributed towards war breaking out.

Warring countries

The war was fought between two groups: the Central Powers (Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and the Ottoman Empire) and the Allied and Associated Powers (27 countries, including Britain and its dominions, France, Russia, Japan, Portugal and Italy). Britain's dominions included Australia, Canada, the Indian subcontinent, New Zealand, Newfoundland, South Africa and parts of the Caribbean and Africa.

Becoming a soldier

When war broke out, the army needed soldiers. Initially, men did not have to fight but were persuaded to join by propaganda. Later on, conscription was introduced in Britian, meaning that men aged between 18 and 41 had to join the army. Soldiers were also recruited from British colonies overseas. In total, 8 million soldiers from Britain and the British Empire fought in battles in France, Belgium, Italy, the Middle East and Africa.

Life in the trenches

Soldiers on both sides dug deep, narrow ditches, called trenches, to hide from enemy attack. Soldiers lived in the trenches for weeks at a time. Trench conditions were terrible. They were smelly, muddy and infested with lice and rats. The soldiers did not get much sleep and were woken early to complete daily chores or fight. During rest time, soldiers wrote letters and sometimes played card games.

Weapons and technology

During the First World War, both sides used a combination of weapons, such as artillery, guns and poison gas, and vehicles, such as tanks and aircrafts. Some of these, like poison gas and tanks, were invented for the First World War and were being used for the first time. Poison gas was one of the most feared weapons of the war and was fired into the trenches inside shells. Its effects included vomiting, sore eyes, blistering skin and internal and external bleeding.

Life on the home front

The war changed the lives of ordinary people around the world. In Britain, rationing, bombing and strikes by discontented workers made life difficult for people living on the home front. New jobs were created to help with the war effort, including jobs for women that had previously been done by the men who had gone to fight. Women worked in munition factories making bombs and weapons, drove public transport, grew crops and took care of livestock, joined the policeforce and undertook non-combative roles in the armed forces. Some men stayed at home because they refused to fight for moral reasons. They were known as conscientious objectors and were often treated harshly.

The end of the war

Remembrance

The poppy is a symbol of remembrance. During the First World War, poppies grew on barren land, such as old battlefields. A Canadian doctor called Lt Col John McCrae was inspired by the sight of the poppies to write a famous poem called In Flanders Fields after his friend died at Ypres. After the war, the poppy became an official symbol of remembrance. There are war cemeteries close to the battlefields, and many countries have memorials for the dead soldiers whose identities are unknown, such as the Grave of the Unknown Warrior in Westminster Abbey, London.

allen

The war ended in 1918, at 11am on the 11th November. Germany signed an armistice, an agreement for peace. The Allies celebrated the end of the war and, in London, a huge crowd gathered in Trafalgar Square. On the 28th June 1919, exactly five years after the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, Germany and the Allied Powers signed a peace treaty called the Treaty of Versailles.
